Ancient Egyptian Jewellery

The Ancient Egyptians valued personal adornment highly and Egyptian jewellery was worn by women and men, and of all social classes. Their statues of gods and kings were decked with lavish jewels. The deceased were adorned in jewellery for their send off into the afterlife. All types of Egyptian jewellery were popular, including bracelets, earrings, collar pieces, anklets, armbands, and rings.

Canopic Jars

A method of artificial preservation, called mummification was developed by the ancient Egyptians. During the process of mummification, all of the major organs were removed and placed in canopic jars. These were jars used by ancient Egyptians to hold mummified remains. During the mummification process the organs of the human body were removed and preserved separately in canopic jars.

- Imsety - a human head that guarded over the liver.
- Qebhseneuf - a falcon's head guarded the intestines.
- Hapy - a baboon's head guarded the lungs.
- Duamutof - a jackal's head guarded the stomach.
